

VISITING THE EYE DOCTOR

An eye doctor helps us keep our eyes healthy. The doctor will look at my eyes to make sure I can see well.

When it is my turn, someone will call me in to let me know the eye doctor is ready to see me. They will ask me to sit in a chair and check my eyes.

It is okay if I feel nervous - I can tell someone how I feel, and I can ask for a break if I need.

Some things the doctor might do to check my eyes are: turn off all the lights in the room, put tools close to my face, use a bright light to check my eyes, use a device to puff air into my eyes, put eye drops in my eyes, and ask me questions.

Sometimes, the doctor will say that I need glasses to help me see better. I can try on different glasses to see which ones fit best.

When the eye doctor finishes, we say goodbye. We will see the doctor again based on when they would like me to come in again.
